What is APAD?

Founded in 1991, the Association for the Anthropology of Social Change and Development aims at promoting scientific debate on the issues of social change and development policies and projects, in Africa and elsewhere.

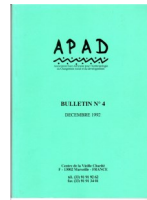

Main academic association on this issue, APAD promotes rigorous qualitative research on actors' representations and practices, and a dialogue with development practitioners.

APAD publishes a Journal Anthropologie & développement, and books. It organises an international conference every two years.

With its 400 members, APAD offers a unique space for scientific debate and publication, for english and french speaking scholars and practitioners, from North and South.

Anthropologie & développement

Since APAD foundation, le Bulletin de l'APAD has become a reference in the field of the anthropology of development.

With its 36 issues, it developed new topics, opened its pages to young scholars, contributed to build bridges between social sciences and development practice.

In 2013, APAD Bulletin became Anthropologie & développement, APAD Journal.

Anthropologie & développement is a bilingual, peer reviewed journal. It is published twice per year, alternating thematic issues and varia.

It is sent to APAD members and can be bought on APAD website.

Papers published in APAD Bulletin and Journal are available in full text one year after publication on <http://apad.revues.org/>

International Conferences

APAD organises every two years an International Conference, alternately in Europe and in Africa. Focused on an emerging issue, APAD Conferences are a unique opportunity for meetings and exchanges. After each conference, selected papers are published in APAD Journal or in books.

Eleven Conferences have been organised since APAD foundation meeting in 1991.

Last conferences:

- The making of Public Action in Countries « under Aid regime », Cotonou (Bénin), 2015

- Fieldwork Relations in the context of Development or Emergency, Montpellier (France), 2013

- Engaging Anthropology in Development and Social Change. Practices, Discourses and Ethics, Ouagadougou (Burkina Faso), 2010

- Development, Liberalism and Modernity. Trajectories for an Anthropology of Social Change, Louvain la Neuve (Belgique), 2007
